

SOCIETY FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF PSYCHOLOGICAL SCIENCE

Dear Ali H. Al-Hoorie,

On behalf of the Society for the Improvement of Psychological Science, I am delighted to inform you that “Teaching open and reproducible scholarship: A critical review of the evidence base for current pedagogical methods and their outcomes” has been selected by the SIPS Awards Committee to receive a SIPS Commendation.

It is important to recognise the labour and commitment involved in improving psychological science, including through research (both academic and non-academic), tools, practice, science communication, and more. To this end, the SIPS Awards Committee gives out two types of awards to recognize projects that further the SIPS mission: SIPS Mission Awards and Commendations.

SIPS Commendations recognize projects that support the SIPS mission, including (but not limited to) contributions that are not typically formally recognized by professional societies (e.g., blog posts, podcasts).

Congratulations!

Sincerely,

July, 2025

Dr. Priya Silverstein, SIPS Awards Committee Chair

<http://improvingpsych.org>